Avoid Insolvency And Using An Insolvency Practitioner

When your company is in a state of insolvency there are limited options available.

Appointing an insolvency practitioner for:

Liquidation

Administration

CVA - company voluntary arrangement

Company Insolvency?

If your company has reached the state of insolvency, you might receive:

- A CCJ, statutory demand, or a petition to wind up your company by a creditor.
- Suppliers and customers may stop contact or take other measures to protect themselves.
- Lenders may call in security (i.e. banks or other secured creditors).
- The director's behaviour comes under scrutiny with the possibility of being held personally liable for company debt if there is evidence of wrongful or fraudulent trading.
- Bank accounts may be frozen.

This is not asset stripping or selling your debtor book

What's the key difference

We buy Your Company

When we buy your company, we are buying the shares of the company. Therefore, we buy all the company's historical, current, and future debts and liabilities.

We don't buy your business

When you buy a business, you buy its assets and goodwill. You are not responsible for any of the business's debts and liabilities prior to the takeover date.

No insolvency practitioners are involved.

It can be completed within three days.

You'll be free from all company debts & liabilities.

Unavoidable VAT & PAYE liabilities

Allison - Recruitment Company (Berkshire)

"One of our main clients went into liquidation and this had a domino effect and left us with significant VAT and PAYE liabilities. Our accountant suggested that we go down the route of a company sale as it was the quickest way to deal with the liabilities and would not leave me with reputational damage should any future clients look me up on the Companies House register"

Questions directors had before they used this service.

"This sounds too good to be true. What's the catch?"
There's no catch. This is a complete legal service provided by UK Solicitors, who have conducted thousands of company sales for over 14 years. It is an alternative to using an insolvency practitioner.

"I've been told you want to buy our debtor book?"
We have no interest in your debtor book.

"Are you after the company's assets?"

We have no interest in any of your company's assets or your private assets.

"What about my bank accounts?"

We have no interest in any of your bank accounts, whether they are company or private.

Real world situations

An alternative to Insolvency Practitioners

Jane - Building Firm (Bristol)

"When our firm got into difficulties we spoke to a couple of Insolvency Practitioners. They didn't seem to understand our issues or have any interest in the future of our business. They only seemed interested in signing us up to their fee agreement. They also demanded to see to all business and personal bank statements over the last few years. The option of transferring our company seemed like a much simpler option and the paperwork was completed within 3 days. The company along with it's liabilities were no longer our concern"

Resolved a winding up petition

Simon - Retail Clothing Chain - (Lancashire)

"The recession and the internet have hit our sales hard over the last few years and we were facing a winding up petition from a supplier. We concluded a company sale which helped to restructure the company. We lost a few stores but the business is now profitable"

HMRC liabilities

Mohammed - Data Company (London)

Alternative to liquidation

Derek - Electrical Company (Wales)

Unavoidable VAT bill

Peter - Telecoms Company (Midlands)

We had a large liability with HMRC and there was no way we could pay this. By selling my company, the debt transferred to the new Directors and shareholders who are experienced in dealing with these situations"

"I wanted to avoid my company going into liquidation, as a Director of a liquidated company, this would prevent me from tendering for future work with local authorities" By selling the company, this avoided that scenario"

"We were affected by the downfall of Carillion and ended up with a huge VAT bill, which was no fault of our own. We decided to sell the company, which avoided any further issues for us."

Sold company

Chris - Construction Company (Edinburgh)

"I hadn't heard of this option until coming across the website. My solicitor had a conversation with their Director and was satisfied this was a legal process, so we proceeded and have no regrets"

Alternative to liquidation

James - Construction Company - (London)

We had to liquidate a company previously and had such a bad experience with the Insolvency Practitioner, so I didn't want to go through this again. Selling the company with all the liabilities transferred to the new Directors was a god send, so relieved.

HMRC & non domestic rates

Usman - Restaurant (Manchester)

"We were drowning in bills from HMRC and Non-Domestic Rates. The situation was getting worse each month. We concluded a company sale to deal with the historical debts and managed to start again"
